All About the Internet

The Internet is a huge network. It connects billions of computers all over the world.

People first started working on connecting computers in the 1960s.

In the 1970s, people created electronic mail, or 'email'. This was a way to send digital letters to each other.

By the 1990s, the World Wide Web was invented. This is a collection of pages, or 'websites'. Each website holds different information. People all over the world can look at the websites.

You need a router to connect to the Internet. The router sends a signal to your device. This signal lets you see words, pictures and videos.

You can access the Internet on a desktop computer, laptop, tablet, smart TV, games console or smartphone.

Today, we use the Internet for lots of different things. It helps people to communicate. We can send messages, photos and videos to each other. We can also have video calls with our friends, family and teachers.

It supports people with learning facts. Many people use a search engine to find answers to questions.

It can also be used for entertainment! You can use the Internet to watch TV shows, listen to music or play games.

The Internet is a really useful tool that many people use every day. It is important that we use the Internet safely. If you ever see anything that you're not sure about, then make sure you follow these simple rules:

Stop what you're doing;

Close the device;

Tell an adult.
